

Avery Dennison® Monarch® Non-Residue Security Seals

Theft is a common challenge for retailers. Often times unpaid for merchandise is carried out of a retail store without anyone noticing. Unfortunately this is all-too-often done by visitors and staff associates.

Unattended exit doors are a common location that thieves target. Many times a staff member places merchandise outside these unattended doors and it is later picked up by an accomplice. Thieves also use exit doors to avoid detection by cashiers or other employees.

Know when your doors have been compromised?

Stores can take simple and safe measures to track when unauthorized movement has occurred within a store. Using Avery Dennison® Non-Residue Security Seals allows for store owners to identify when an unattended door has been opened. This security label will break apart at perforations allowing for quick identification that a door has been opened without authorization. Additionally, if removal of the label is attempted, it will identify tampering by leaving small circles behind. The destruction the label prevents thieves from just trying to put it back. With this visual identification, retailers can then review video surveillance to see how and when this occurred.

Battle theft at the back door.

Non-residue security labels will help reduce the risk of visitors or staff from removing inventory without payment. Be proactive and track any unauthorized movement of merchandise throughout your supply chain. These labels still allow for quick access if needed to still get out if an emergency happens, but quickly identify if someone went out the door.
